FUNDAMENTAL BUSINESS PLANNING

by

Ateng Surachmat, MBA., BSc.

Introduction

Business plan is a fundamental document that any new business should have in place prior to beginning operations. There are benefits to creating (and sticking to) a good business plan. These include being able to think through ideas before investing too much money in them and working through potential obstacles to success.

A good business plan should outline all the projected costs and possible pitfalls of each decision a company makes. Basic elements of business plan are executive summary of the business and detailed descriptions of its operations, products and services, and financial projections. A plan also states how the business intends to achieve its goals.

The existing Company also required developing a business plan especially if there is a plan to open new operations, branch, products, or new technology to improve the profitability.
